ASTM defines a degradable plastic as a plastic designed to undergo a significant change in its chemical structure under specific environmental conditions resulting in a loss of some properties as measured by a standard test method appropriate to the plastic and the application in a period of time that determines its classification. A biodegradable plastic is defined here as a degradable plastic in which the degradation results from the action of naturally occurring micro-organisms. The components used in the manufacture of BANTEX-TERRA™ laminates were evaluated using relevant tests based on accepted ASTM & ISO standards. The results indicate the components used in the production of BANTEX-TERRA™ are subject to biodegradation.

These products may be disposed in commercial landfill environments. The rate and extent of degradation can vary depending on the conditions at the disposal site. Disposal in a residential or industrial compost facility is not recommended due to the shortened duration of their compost cycle may be insufficient to support degradation.
